SPECIAL FIELD GUIDE FOR LOCAL BUSINESSES

Before You Build Your Website

A CLEAR FRONT DOOR GUIDE

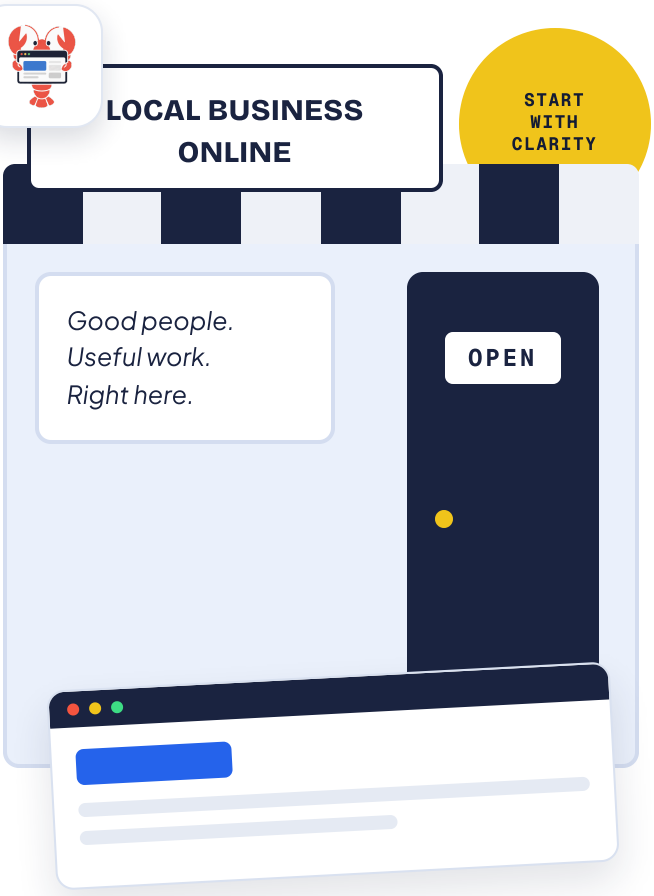

A plain-English guide to what your website needs so people can understand your business, trust the next step, and know how to reach you.

CLEAR MESSAGE

EASY CONTACT PATH

ONE NEXT STEP

> Most people do not need a complicated website to get started. They need a clear place to send people. That is what this guide is about.

THE PLAIN TRUTH

Your website does not have to say everything.

A good starter website has one main job.

It helps the right person feel like they landed in the right place, understand what you do, and know what to do next.

That sounds simple because it should be simple. The useful part is making the path feel clear enough that a real person can move forward.

KEEP THIS IN MIND

A website is not just decoration. It is a handoff from attention to action.

AD NOTE

A click is not the finish line. It is the handoff.

THE FRONT DOOR IDEA

Your website is the front door before the real conversation.

Before someone calls, messages, books, visits, or buys, they often look for one simple signal: does this feel like the right place?

THEY HEAR ABOUT YOU

A friend, post, ad, card, search, or referral points them your way.

THEY LOOK YOU UP

They want the business to make sense quickly.

THEY FEEL GROUNDED

The page gives them enough clarity to keep going.

THEY ACT

They call, message, inquire, stop in, or keep reading.

THE GOAL

Make it easy for a real person to understand the business and move one step closer.

Clear place.
Clear step.

That is the kind of website people can use without studying it.

WHAT PEOPLE NEED FAST

People should understand the business without working for it.

A clear website answers the important questions early, in plain language, with enough warmth to feel real.

1. WHAT DO YOU DO?
   Say it plainly. Let the visitor understand the business fast.

2. WHO IS IT FOR?
   Help the right person recognize themselves without making the page feel narrow.

3. WHY SHOULD I TRUST THIS?
   Use grounded details: location, process, real work, tone, and contact information.

4. WHAT DO I DO NEXT?
   Make the next step visible and simple.

READER TEST

THE QUICK TEST

Could someone who just heard about you understand what to do next in the first few seconds?

THE BETTER FEELING

The visitor lands, recognizes the business, and feels comfortable taking the next step.

WHAT A STARTER WEBSITE SHOULD MAKE CLEAR

The best starter website is built around clarity first.

CLEAR MESSAGE

People should quickly understand what you do and why it matters to them.

CLEAR SERVICE PATH

Your services should be easy to scan, easy to understand, and easy to connect to the next step.

CLEAR LOCAL SIGNAL

Your page should feel like it belongs to a real business, not a blank template floating online.

CLEAR CONTACT PATH

The visitor should know how to reach you from a phone, laptop, or quick search.

Not fancy first.
Clear first.

Design matters. But design should carry the message, not bury the action.

GOOD DESIGN HELPS

A clean website can still feel warm, personal, and proud. The key is that every part supports the next step.

SIMPLE WEBSITE CHECKLIST

Use this before you build, rebuild, or refresh.

You do not need to grade yourself perfectly. This is a plain way to see whether your website is ready to help people move forward.

- [ ] Can someone tell what I do in the first few seconds?
- [ ] Is the main next step obvious without hunting?
- [ ] Does the page sound like a real local business?
- [ ] Can someone contact me easily from a phone?
- [ ] Do my services feel easy to understand?
- [ ] Does the page answer what people usually ask first?
- [ ] Is there one main action I want people to take?
- [ ] Would I feel comfortable sending this link to a new customer?

USEFUL LITTLE RULE

The clearer the next step feels, the easier it is for someone to trust the page and keep moving.

WHAT TO DECIDE BEFORE YOU BUILD

A little clarity up front makes the whole website easier.

The build goes smoother when the big decisions are plain before the first page is designed.

A YOUR MAIN PROMISE
What should someone understand about your business right away?

B YOUR MAIN SERVICE PATH
What do people most need to know before they reach out?

C YOUR MAIN NEXT STEP
Should they call, fill out a form, book, email, stop in, or request details?

D YOUR FOLLOW-THROUGH
What should happen after someone reaches out so the handoff still feels steady?

THAT IS THE WORK

The page is not just a pretty place online. It is part of the customer path.

AD NOTE

Build the path before you polish the sign.

THE SIMPLE NEXT STEP
